

Biographical Information

John Paul Marosy

John Paul Marosy is a pioneer in the field of aging. His latest book, Elder Care: A Six Step Guide to Balancing Work and Family has won both a national 2003 Mature Media Award and a 2003 Caregiver Friendly Award from Today's Caregiver magazine. He is also the author of A Manager's Guide to Elder Care and Work (Greenwood Publishing, Westport, CT, 1999), the standard reference text on this subject. He is the author of numerous articles on the subject and is a sought-after speaker.

As president of Bringing Elder Care Home LLC, John Paul consults with business and community organizations to create work places that allow employed caregivers to balance elder care and work.

Over the past 25 years, John Paul has served as CEO of leading healthcare organizations, including Minuteman Senior Services (Burlington, MA), the Home Health Assembly of New Jersey (Princeton, NJ) and Visiting Nurse Affiliates (Cambridge, MA).

And he has lived the elder care experience as a family caregiver to his father.

John Paul serves as national program director of the Communicating Effectively with Healthcare Professionals Program of the National Family Caregivers Association, a Program of National Significance funded by the U.S. Administration on Aging.

He is a founder of the Family Caregiving Coalition of New England and serves as central New England Representative for the NFCA Caregiver Community Action Network.

The Planning Partnership In Aging, a program conceived and implemented by John Paul, received a Presidential Citation from the President's Council on Public/Private Initiatives.

John Paul holds a Masters Degree in Urban Affairs from Boston University and a bachelors in Urban Studies from Saint Peter's College in Jersey City, NJ. He is the immediate past president of the Massachusetts Gerontology Association and is an active member of the American Society on Aging, the Alliance for Work/Life Progress, the New England Employee Benefits Council, and the National Speakers Association. He resides in Worcester, Massachusetts with wife Donna and son Martin.